You May Have a Lower Deductible Starting September 1

Due to a change in state law, the income rules for Medicaid will be changing on September 1, 2019. The amount of income you can have each month and be enrolled in Medicaid will be increasing.

Starting September 1, 2019, you can have up to $1,040.83 in income each month if you're unmarried. If you're married, you can have up to $1,409.17 in income per month.

Based on the information you've given us, your monthly income is more than these new income amounts. This means that you still need to meet a deductible before you can get Medicaid benefits. Your deductible is the difference between your monthly income and these new income amounts over a six-month period of time, which is called a deductible period.

Although you still need to meet a deductible, you may have a lower deductible starting September 1. To find out if you have a lower deductible because of the change to the income rules, please call your agency at the phone number listed at the top of this letter.

Once you meet your deductible, you can get Medicaid benefits for the rest of your deductible period. You can meet your deductible in any of the following ways:

- Have medical bills that are more than your deductible.
- Prepay your deductible.
- Have medical bills that are less than your deductible and prepay the rest of your deductible.

If you have questions about the change to the income rules or this letter, please call your agency.
