

Long-term care resources

ADRCs and Tribal partner agencies are your bridge to publicly funded long-term care programs. When considering assisted living, a nursing home, or remaining at home, your local agency can meet you for a free, unbiased consultation.

We will help you:

- Evaluate your level of need for services.
- Know your financial options.
- Understand the limitations of publicly funded programs.
- Plan for the future.

Understand your support options

- Be aware of important things to consider
- Consider all long-term care options available
- Make an informed decision

Contact your local ADRC or Tribal partner agency for expert guidance and free resources.

Let Us Help

When looking for long-term care services and supports your local Aging and Disability Resource Center (ADRC) or Tribal partner agency can give you free guidance.

It can be difficult to know whether you have made the best decision for yourself or a loved one.

Get answers to questions including:

- How can I stay in my home?
- How long will my money last?
- What can I get help with?
- What do I look for in a facility?
- How do I know what I can afford?

You're not alone.

Discover your possibilities

Expert guidance

Agency staff are experts in resources and programs, so you can receive the care you need.

Meeting you where you need us

ADRCs serve every county and Tribal nation in Wisconsin. Professional staff are available to meet with you in your own home, at our offices, or wherever is convenient for you.

Wisconsin's long-term care programs aim to support people to live in their own home or with family, whenever possible.

We don't sell anything. We aren't affiliated with a company or product. Get advice that is free and unbiased. Your bridge to support starts with the right information.
